Scenes from Quest of the Nile. . After British explorers had confirmed in the mid-nineteenth century that the Nile issued from the east. The Nile is a major north-flowing river in northeastern Africa, and is commonly regarded as the longest river in the world. The Nile basin is complex, and because of this, the discharge at any given point along the mainstem depends on the weather in the basin. Rushdi Said postulated that Egypt itself supplied most of the waters of the Nile during the early part of its history. Its basin includes parts of Tanzania, Burundi, Rwanda, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Kenya, Uganda, South Sudan, Ethiopia, Sudan, and the cultivated Nile valley.
